The Shova Luta Bicycle Co-operative promotes bike use both as an ecologically sound means of transport and as a project for poverty alleviation. Its members sell and repair bicycles from a shed in Ivory Park. They have received second-hand bicycles from various sources such as Re-cycle in the United Kingdom. In addition, the co-operative also advocates cycling as a means of healthy living and as a cheap and easy transport system for local entrepreneurs. Non-motorised transport is vital to the economic development of depressed communities as it:

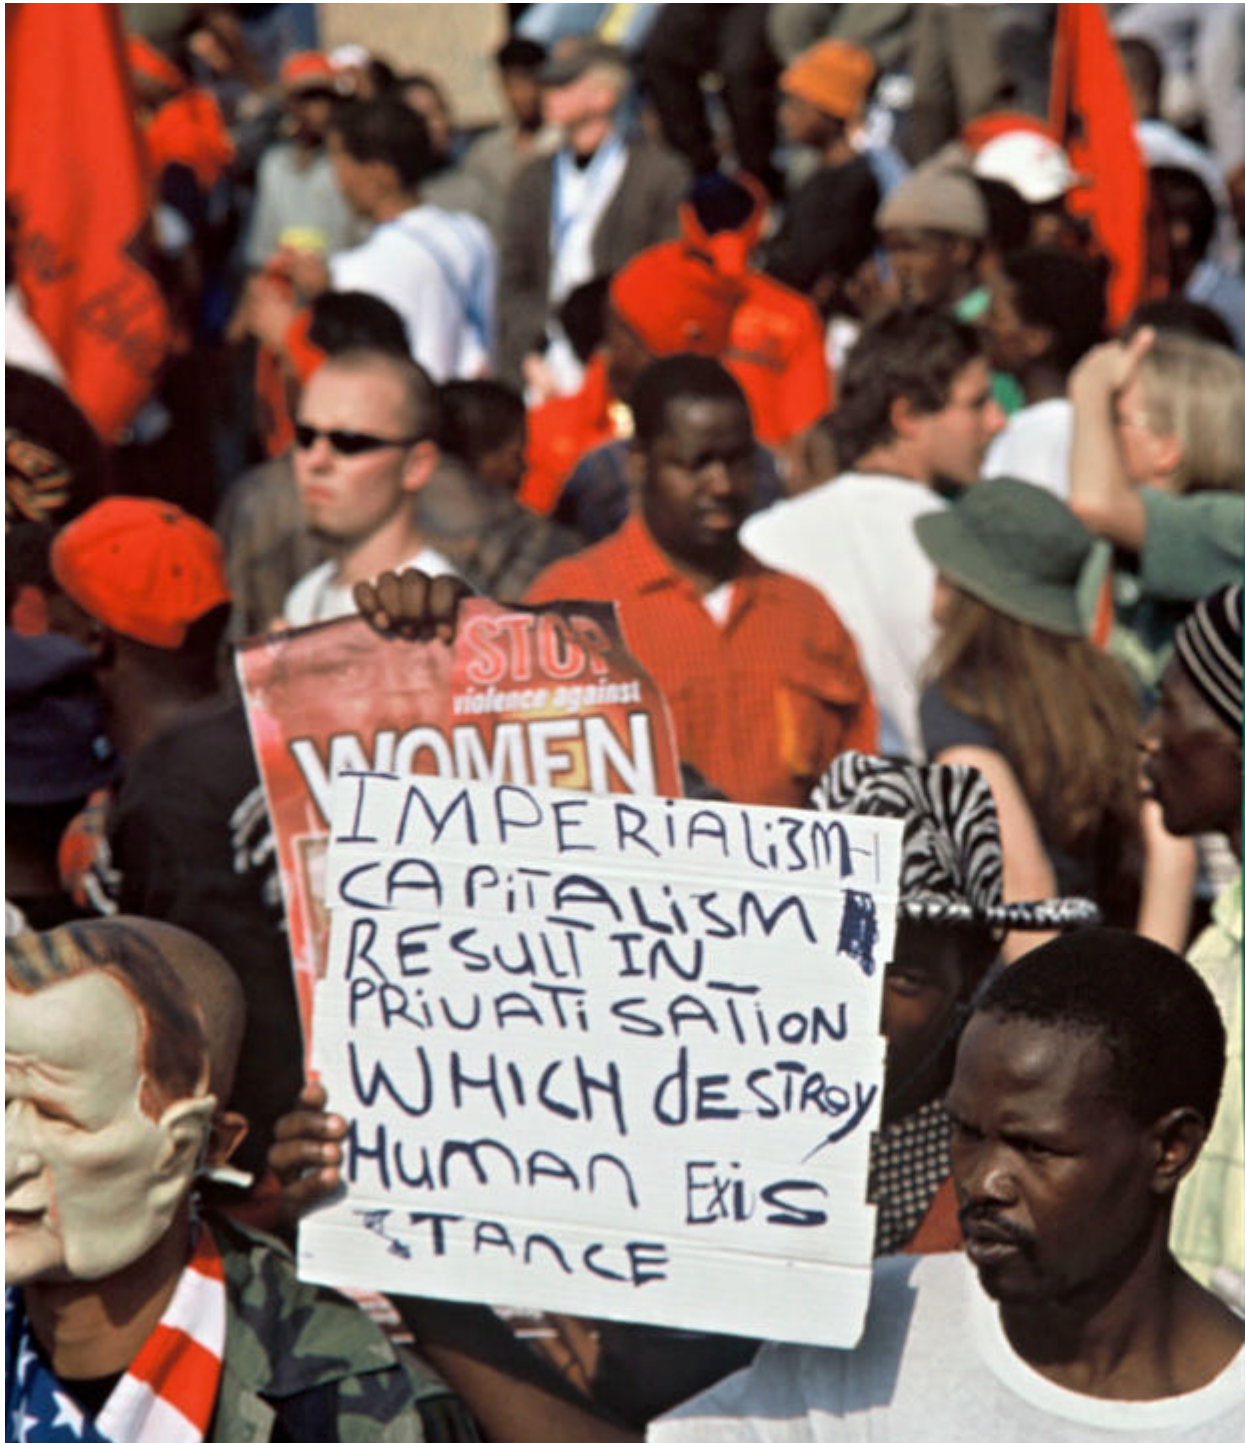

- reduces poverty;
- creates business;
- saves money;
- keeps body fit; and
- is environmental friendly.
